

Prof. Dr. Eberhart Zrenner
Distinguished Professor of Ophthalmology

Professor Zrenner is Head of Pathophysiology of Vision at the Institute for Ophthalmic Research of the University of Tuebingen, Germany. His research interests include retinal physiology and pathophysiology, neuro-ophthalmology, ophthalmogenetics and retinal prosthetics, He has made numerous contributions to basic science, clinical diagnosis and treatment in inherited retinal dystrophies.

He obtained his MD degree in 1972 at the Technical University of Munich and subsequently worked at the Max-Planck-Institute, at the National Eye Institute, NIH, and at the University Eye Hospital in Munich. He became full professor and Chairman at University Eye Hospital in Tuebingen in 1989 where he founded the Institute for Ophthalmic Research, including a special clinic for hereditary retinal degenerations. He has received numerous grants and awards, two honorary Doctoral Degrees and has published approximately 625 peer-reviewed papers (<http://www.eye-tuebingen.de/zrenner>), cited 30.317 times (with h-Index of 86; Google Scholar).